

EARTH HAS PASSED THROUGH COMET'S TAIL

Bump Wasn't Even Felt As We Sailed Through Appendage of Halley's Visitor for Five Hours

Astronomers at Yerkes Observatory Succeed in Taking Scores of Photographs and Accurate Records of Meteoric Phenomena.

Columbus, May 19.—The comet came, the comet went, and this old earth is no worse and no better, and thus far, very little wiser. There was no collision, as the superstitious and the ignorant feared, and, now that the comet is headed away from us, there will be no recurrence of the manifestations of terror that were recorded from all parts of the country and of the world.

The earth did pass through the tail of the comet, and simultaneously brilliant auroral displays were seen from Williams Bay, Wis., Milwaukee and elsewhere, but the majority of astronomers were not willing to concede that the streamers in the heavens were consequent upon the presence of cometic matter in our atmosphere.

Nor did anybody suffocate from deadly cyanogen gas. Comet parties were held everywhere—in the streets, on roof tops, in gardens—but for all that was visible to the naked eye, the tail of the comet was "only the veries, approach to nothing set in the midst of naught."

In fact, the phenomena of the daylight hours of yesterday were far more interesting. During afternoon sun spots were observed in varying numbers about the same hour from five western observatories, but the astronomers who recorded them were almost unanimous in the belief that these disturbances of the solar atmosphere had nothing to do with the approach of the comet and were merely coincidental.

Thirty sun spots were seen from St. Louis, of which the largest was estimated to be 150,000 miles across; two from San Jose, Cal., with 12 surrounding spots, or smaller spots; three "considerably accentuated" spots from Chicago; three connected spots from Vallejo, Cal., and two from Portland, Ore.

None of the eastern observatories had anything of note to report either during the day or the night. At Chicago and at Williams Bay, Wis., where is the great Yerkes telescope, the conditions for observations seemed best, and astronomers there were confident that the negative as well as the positive results of their examination would be of lasting scientific value.

The whole performance took little more than five hours. Observers differ as to the exact time at which the earth began to pass through the comet's tail, but the general opinion averages a moment between 10 and 11 o'clock last night. The combined speed of the earth and the tail of the comet was estimated at slightly more than 46 miles a second, and the breadth of the tail at about 1,000,000 miles. Friday the comet will become visible again, headed away from us, with the tail sticking straight out of the western sky, a little above the spot where the sun sinks. There will then be no light from the rising sun to dim the glory of the spectacle, and it is likely to be far more majestic than in the stages of its approach. At the end of a month, good-bye for another 75 years.

Yerkes Observatory, Williams Bay, Wis., May 19.—As the world passed through the tail of Halley's comet, astronomers at the Yerkes Observatory here last night obtained photographs and accurate records of meteoric phenomena and varying heavenly illumination under a most favorable conditions, nearly perfect for work with camera and telescope. The pictures and data are considered of unusual value and may develop some of the information and theories of unexpected importance.

Despite a spectacular display of aurora lights, which moved across the sky from east to west, Professor Frost, in charge of the observatory, and Professor McNeill, of New York, do not connect the phenomena directly with the comet. The aurora which last night followed the observation of three huge sun spots late yesterday afternoon.

"While the glow of the comet's tail is readily discernible," said Professor Frost shortly before midnight, "we have observed little striking phenomena that can be attributed to Halley's comet. But that does not lessen the value of negative observations secured."

Prof. Edward E. Barnard, one of the world's greatest authorities on comets, was much pleased with the result of his observations, which have extended almost without interruption for a period of 48 hours.

A most painstaking search was made through the tail of the comet for spots where illumination might be lacking. This lack of illumination

ATTRIBUTE EXPLOSION WHICH KILLED 100 TO THE COMET

Havana, May 19.—Frightened inhabitants who line the streets today, kneeling in prayer, have left the work of recovering bodies from the ruins of the dynamite explosion, which killed 100 and injured 500 at the barracks last night, to the doctors, nurses and soldiers. The people attribute the explosion to the comet and refuse to touch the ruins. Twenty-six bodies were recovered during the night, but few will ever be identified. A common grave is being dug to bury the victims.

COLUMBUS JOLTS MARSHALL AND WAYNE B. WHEELER

Columbus, May 19.—The primary election result was a distinct blow to Mayor Marshall and Wayne B. Wheeler and their supporters. When the mayor learns his campaign for reelection, he must make the same kind of a fight as last year.

Edward C. Turner, who defeated Bronson and came for the prosecutor's nomination, issued the following statement yesterday:

"I am, of course, delighted with the result, but would have preferred better weather conditions with a full vote."

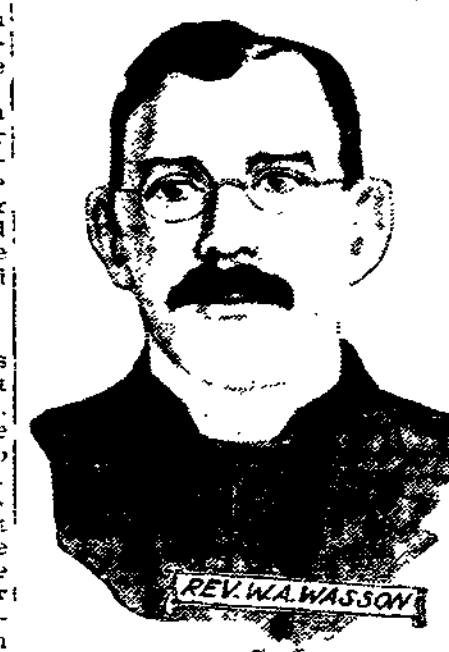

"The conduct of my opponents during the campaign was above criticism and I thank all of them for the gentlemanly way in which they treated me."

"The attack made upon me at the last moment by Wayne B. Wheeler was unjustified and the fallacy of his accusation is shown by the fact that I carried every ward in the city with but one exception, and lost that one by only a few votes."

"The duties of the prosecutor are plain and easily understood, and I wish to make it clear that I will fully discharge every duty of the office without exception, if am elected, and I expect to be."

RECTOR RESIGNS FROM CHURCH TO FIGHT PROHIBITION.

New York, May 19.—Rev. Wm. A. Wasson, rector of the Grace Episcopal church at Riverhead, N. Y., a fashionable summer resort, is going to give up the pulpit to defend the liquor cause in the United States. In a letter to Bishop Burgess Mr. Wasson tenders his resignation as rector of his church and says that he thinks it his duty to fight prohibition. Mr. Wasson has long been prominent in attacking prohibition. In his letter he states: "The supreme immorality that confronts and threatens the Christian church in this country is that which masks and misrepresents itself under the guise of that noble word 'temperance.' The prohibition movement is more dangerous than commercialism, for the latter at least makes no pretense. If it demoralizes it does not deceive. The poisonous influence of this humbug 'temperance' is more disastrous than that of drunkenness, for the latter is seen and loathed for what it is, whereas the prohibition propaganda parades in the liveliest of hypocrisy."

Mr. Wasson was born in Naperville, Ill., in 1867. Early in life he was a telegraph operator. His first rectorship was that of St. Andrew's church, New York City. He subsequently was rector of St. Paul's

HORSE'S KICK BREAKS JAW OF GRANVILLE LAD

Harry Hartman, a little orphan boy of eight years of age, and who lives with Mrs. Susan Hartman, of Granville, met with a very painful accident at his home this morning by being kicked in the face by a horse, breaking the lower jaw at the angle on the right side and on the left side between the curvature in front and the angle. The little fellow, although suffering excruciating pain, rushed to the house and told his guardian, who hurried him to the Newark Sanitarium, in this city, where he is now under a physician's care. The boy's bones will knit rapidly, but in all probability there will be a slight disfigurement caused by lumps where the bone mends.

BURGLARS ARE CAUGHT RED HANDED

Police Capture Two Men in Restaurant at Early Hour This Morning.

A peculiar noise that aroused a woman and excited her suspicions, resulted in the capture of two burglars red handed in the restaurant of Robert Folliard, Sixth and Wilson S. S., at 1:30 o'clock this morning. Shortly after 1 o'clock the telephone bell at police headquarters rang and an excited voice told Capt. Bell that burglars were trying to break into the place.

Officers Hinger and Callan were called and the three officers hurried to the restaurant, taking different routes. Their arrival was so arranged that they all reached the place at the same time and surrounded it. Two men were inside the room, but they quickly surrendered when ordered to do so by the officers, who covered them with their revolvers. The patrol was called and the two were sent to the city prison. Mr. Folliard was called, but prompt arrival of the police prevented the intended robbery and the proprietor did not find anything missing.

At the city prison the men gave their names as Robert Burns and John Keller. A charge of burglary was placed against them.

En route to the restaurant was rained by a band of a rear door and was then easy to throw the lock. In the same place Officer Hager shot at a burglar several months ago while the burglar was trying to rob the restaurant, but the burglar is now serving time in the penitentiary.

MONEY STOLEN FROM OFFICE

Boxley City, Pa., May 19.—A package containing cash and paper money amounting to $2,024.24 was stolen from the American Express company office here today. The money had been left at the station by Paymaster F. S. Morris, of the Pennsylvania railroad. Manager Truby of the express company believes that it was stolen when he was out of the office a few minutes to meet a train. The package was under a counter, being too bulky to fit in the safe.

Many a man who looks very wise doesn't know who he isn't talking about.

BISHOP AND LADY VON SCHEELE OF SWEDEN TO TOUR THE UNITED STATES

Rock Island, May 19.—Bishop G. von Scheele of Sweden comes to America in June as the representative of the Swedish state church and of King Gustav V. to attend the fiftieth anniversary jubilee celebration of the Augustana synod and Augustana college at Rock Island, Ill. The Augustana synod is the Swedish Lutheran church organization of North America, number more than a quarter of a million members. Augustana college is the synod's principal educational institution. Both are 50 years old this year. Bishop von Scheele will arrive in New York on June 1 and will proceed direct to Washington to convey greetings to President Taft from the Swedish monarch before continuing to Rock Island. The bishop has visited America twice before. On the occasion of his last visit in 1901 he received the degree of LL. D. from Yale university. He is regarded as one of the most learned men of Sweden and has been decorated with many European orders. The jubilee celebration will be held from June 5 to 15, after the close of which Bishop von Scheele will make an extended tour of the United States, speaking at Chicago, St. Paul, Tacoma, Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Salt Lake City, Denver, Erie and New York. He will be accompanied on the trip by Lady von Scheele.

CENTRAL BOARD BILL VETOED BY GOVERNOR

Columbus, May 19.—Governor Burton Wednesday vetoed the central board plan bill. This bill was originally one of the administration measures, but it did not contain the provisions which the governor desired, as drawn by Senator Alsdorf, in vetoing the measure the governor said:

"As originally introduced and passed by the senate its bill No. 5 entitled 'A bill to create a board of administration for the institutions of the state,' etc., applied to them all, with a few exceptions. The amended substitute bill bearing the same number and title applies only to four of them."

The members are to be appointed and qualify within sixty days and to organize and elect a secretary and other officers within thirty days thereafter. Various minor duties are to be performed by the board meanwhile, but it is not to take charge of the four institutions until February 10, 1911, when the next general assembly will have long been in session (Section 1).

No good reason appears why the members and their appointees should draw full pay for so long a period before they really enter upon their work. And there is serious risk of leaving these important public establishments without authorized control because the board on its organization is to succeed to and be vested with the title and all rights of the present separate boards which, however, do not go out of existence until February 10, 1911, (Section 7).

There are various other defects in the bill due, doubtless, to the haste with which it was passed at the close of the session. They are apparent on reading."

But the chief objection to the bill is that it is only the mangled remains of a carefully drawn measure which, in common with disinterested citizens generally I believe would have been of great benefit to the state by way of economy in the greatest and most costly of its undertakings, as well as in other ways."

If in its present form the bill might serve as a trial sample of what the original design would accomplish, so that it it should prove satisfactory the other institutions might be included, it would be worth trying. But I think a board restricted as it would be by this bill could not make a fair showing, and the result would be used unfairly to discredit a plan which I still hope to see adopted."

I therefore herewith file the bill with the secretary of state marked vetoed."

WAITING TO VIEW REMAINS

Line Two Miles Long Stretched from Palace Gate This Morning

CROWD MAY RUSH GUARD

Kaiser Arrived in London at Noon Today and Was Met at Station by King.

London, May 19.—This is the last day that the king's body will lie in state. A line nearly two miles long stretched out from the Westminster gate this morning. Hundreds were women who had remained in line all night. Numerous thunder storms failed to drive them to cover. Although camp chairs were used, more than 50 persons were overcome by exhaustion.

Fears that the crowds will rush the guards have caused 3000 extra soldiers to be stationed about the hall. Several rushes were made last night, which the police with difficulty held back. Thousands in the rear of the line will not be able to see the body.

The King of England and the Emperor of Germany embraced each other in tears and kissed at the Victoria station at noon today when the Kaiser arrived from Sheerness.

The Kaiser, nephew of the dead king and popularly credited with being the arch-foe of England, appeared deeply moved as he greeted King George, his royal cousin. The two rulers exchanged kisses on either cheek. The meeting took place on the station platform. Lord Roberts headed the reception committee that met the Kaiser at Port Victoria and accompanied him to London. The Duke of Cornwall, the heir apparent of the dead king, Prince Henry of Prussia, brother of the Kaiser, and a large group of noblemen were at the station to welcome the Kaiser, who was taken at once to Buckingham palace.

The line waiting to see the king's body was halted and the gates closed long enough to allow the Kaiser to view the body and place a wreath on the casket. The Kaiser knelt in prayer for a few moments, and the gates were thrown open again.

WILL THESE SIX INSURGENT SENATORS SURRENDER TO PRESIDENT TAFT?

Washington, May 12.—From now until the close of Congress the country is due to witness a spirited fight between the administration forces and six insurgent senators. Seymour's Poultry Pointers

Poultry Diseases.
Crop Bound—Enlargement of the crop—Cause, obstruction of the crop at the outlet, usually with dead grain, hay or straw. Cure, give castor or olive oil, then hold the bird's head down; work the contents with the fingers and gradually empty the crop at the mouth. If this does not succeed, pluck the feathers from the breast, cut the outer skin about one inch in length near the upper part of the crop; then cut through the crop, making an incision about one-half inch in length; carefully remove contents of crop and see that the outlet is not obstructed; then sew with white silk the walls of the crop first; care must be taken that when sewing the walls of the crop, nothing else be included. After this is done, the other tissues and skin should be drawn together with several stitches. In five or six days remove the stitches from the outer skin. Do not feed the fowl for at least 24 hours. Then feed lightly on bread and milk for several days.
Cholera—Very contagious. Symptoms, watery diarrhoea, rough plumage, drooping wings, head drooped, great thirst, eyelids half closed. Cause, generally started by filth. Cure, scald all the drinking vessels and put cod oil in drinking water.
Congestion of Liver—Symptoms, lack of color of comb and wattles, diarrhoea, loss of appetite. Cause, over-feeding too much starch in ration and not enough exercise. Cure, have mash largely composed of cut clover, with bran and middlings; give a teaspoonful of castor oil; scatter grain in dry litter to induce exercise.

PANIC ON SINKING STEAMBOAT

KANSAS CITY, May 12.—Panic stricken by the realization that they were on a sinking steamer, 150 passengers, men, women and children, struggled this morning to escape from the excursion steamer Uncle Sam, when it struck a sand bar and capsized at the Missouri river near here yesterday afternoon. Only the coles of the boat's crew prevented loss of life.
The accident occurred in mid-stream where the river is wide and deep. The steamer was attempting to turn round and while backing down river with the rapid current, struck the large sand bar squarely, crushing in the entire right side of the boat. The boat filled swiftly and men and women began to scream. "She is sinking!" was the cry.
Instantly the officers and crew found themselves in the midst of a struggling mass of humanity.
The boat was headed for the shore, but before arriving it sank on one side, submerging half the deck. A few persons jumped overboard, but as the water was shallow they were rescued without difficulty. Officers of the government steamer Missouri saw the plight of the Uncle Sam, and their boat to the rescue. The crew of the excursion boat found it impossible to make use of lifeboats.
In less than 10 minutes after the boat sank every passenger was safely on the shore.
The boat was 60 feet long and 22 feet beam. The loss is estimated at $25,000.

TAX COMMISSION AND ITS DUTIES

Synopsis of Act Passed By the State Legislature.

BIG CHANGE IN TAX SYSTEM

One Commission Takes the Place of Existing Ex-Officio Boards For Enforcing Taxation Laws—State Decennial Board of Equalization Abolished—Appraise Taxable Property at Full Value—Corporation Taxes.

The act known as the Langdon law creating a state tax commission was developed from a bill (H. B. No. 68) by Representative L. K. Langdon of Warren county. It was finally drafted in conference committee.

In its final form the act consists of 123 sections and would fill about 18 newspaper columns, if printed in full. It goes into effect July 1, 1910, but the first commission may be appointed and organized before that date.

The act provides for a commission of three; not more than two at any time shall belong to the same political party; term three years in rotation after original appointments expiring second Monday in February, 1910, 1911 and 1912; vacancies to be filled for balance of unexpired term; salary $5,000 each per annum; no bond required; appointments subject to confirmation by senate, and appointment not qualified to act unless appointed during recess or adjournment of senate.

The commission shall be known as The Tax Commission of Ohio; have a separate seal, an office suitably furnished outside the state house and hold sessions anywhere within the state; two shall be a quorum, but investigations may be made by one member alone; all orders shall be confirmed by the commission and entered in the record.

Governor may at any time remove a commissioner for inefficiency, neglect of duty or malfeasance.

Commission and employees must give entire time to their duties; be in continuous session during business hours every day except Sundays and legal holidays; all sessions open to public; keep public record of proceedings.

No commissioner or employee shall hold any other position of trust or profit, engage in any business inconsistent with official duties, nor serve on or under committee of any political party, which must be sworn to in the commissioner's oath of office.

The commission may employ a secretary, examiners, clerks, stenographers, accountants, stenographers and other assistants, whose employment and compensation shall be first approved by the governor. Commissioners and employees shall also receive necessary traveling expenses properly certified and allowed. The commission may adopt rules to govern its proceedings and to regulate the mode of valuing real and personal property not specifically provided for in the act; may confer with officers of other states and of the United States on official business, and call upon attorney general or, under his direction, county prosecuting attorney, to assist in investigations or trials to enforce the act and punish violations thereof.

Members of the commission shall have the right, on demand, to inspect the books and accounts of public service and private corporations or companies and examine officers or employees thereof under oath. The commission may delegate the same power to an agent by written authority prescribing the duties to be performed; the agent shall have inquiry powers and the same authority as a notary public to take depositions but shall not divulge information acquired by him except in his report to the commission or as a witness in court under penalty of $50 to $100 fine and be disqualified from service.

The commission, by order or subpoena, may require any company, corporation or utility to produce books, papers or records, or verified copies thereof, under penalty of $50 to $500 fine; specific answers must be made to all questions submitted by the commission; if submitted in blanks, the answers shall be verified under oath by president, secretary, superintendent or manager, and if unable to answer any question a good reason shall be given in writing, blanks to be filled out and returned within the time fixed by the commission. Maps, profiles, contracts, reports of engineers, documents, books, accounts, papers and records, or copies of same shall be furnished on demand.

Each commissioner, the secretary and every agent shall have power to administer oaths, certify to official acts, subpoenas and compel attendance of witnesses and the production of documents and testimony. Disobedience may be certified to common pleas court for contempt proceedings.

For serving a summons or subpoena shall be the same as sheriff's fees, and witness fees shall be the same as in civil cases in common pleas court. Testimony of witnesses may be taken by deposition. Transcript of testimony, properly certified, may be offered in evidence in court; copy of such transcript may be obtained by any party upon payment of the usual fee.

No person shall be excused from testifying or producing evidence on ground of incrimination, but shall be exempt from prosecution except for perjury in so testifying.

From section 25 to section 30, inclusive, and in numerous subsequent sections are set out in detail too minute to give in full the methods for valuing and assessing express, telegraph, telephone, sleeping car, freight line, equipment, railway and other public utility corporations, industrial corporations and banks, under the Nichols, Cole and Willis acts.

Express and telegraph companies are to be assessed at 2 per cent on gross receipts of business within the state; railroads and pipe lines at 4 per cent on gross earnings from business within the state; interurban, suburban and municipal railways at 1.2 (one and two-tenths) per cent on gross earnings within the state; telephone, electric light, gas, heating, waterworks, water transportation, union depot, messenger and signal companies at 1.2 per cent on gross receipts from business within the state; commercial and industrial corporations at three-tenths of one per cent on capital stock issued.

All these changes as to rates are to go into effect next year at the usual time under present laws.

Existing Boards Abolished.

All existing boards for the regulation of the various corporation taxes are abolished, also the boards composed of county auditors for appraising railroads, and their duties are transferred to the commission. The state board consisting of state auditor, state treasurer, secretary of state and attorney general is to appoint city boards of tax review.

After deducting real estate, the value placed upon telegraph and telephone companies shall be apportioned among the counties pro rata; in like manner the values upon gross earnings of express companies shall be pro-rated among the counties; said apportionment to be certified to county auditors by Aug. 15 to be apportioned and collected in the county.

After this year the excise tax charged upon sleeping-car, freight line and equipment companies shall be certified by the commission to the state auditor in September and by the state auditor in October to the state treasurer for collection.

The commission shall certify to the state auditor by Oct. 1 and the state auditor shall make duplicate in October to be certified to the state treasurer for collection the taxes upon gross receipts or earnings of public utilities (except railroads and pipe lines) for the year ending May 1 preceding, and in November the assessments upon pipe line companies for the same period and upon railroads for the year ending June 30.

The state treasurer shall make the collections and make daily settlements with the state auditor. Such taxes collected by state treasurer are to be paid into the state's general revenue fund. Failure to pay before Dec. 31 shall be subject to 15 per cent penalty and certified to attorney general for collection, for which suits may be brought in any county where in delinquent company is located.

In November each year the commission shall report to the secretary of state all corporations having fully complied with the law.

Municipal corporations are exempt from making returns or paying taxes. The physical property of public utility corporations, except express, telegraph and telephone companies, shall be assessed between Jan. 15 and May 15 annually at full value in money according to sworn statements furnished the commission, including real estate, personal property, money and credits. Each utility so assessed shall be granted a hearing upon 10 days' notice stating time and place. In this respect the commission shall have all powers heretofore conferred on county auditors. The values shall be apportioned among the counties interested respectively, and certified to the county auditors to be placed upon the county tax duplicate for collection and apportionment among the local taxing districts. The value upon utilities partly within and without the state shall be the proportionate share of the entire value.

Values fixed upon public utilities located in more than one county shall be apportioned according to the proportionate share of the whole located within each county, to be distributed in turn among the various taxing districts; a like distribution is to be made of values upon utilities wholly within a county.

The commission may remit taxes and penalties resulting from error or negligence of taxing officials, and correct errors in a single assessment or in county tax duplicates, if remissions applied for exceed $500 notice shall be given county auditor and prosecuting attorney in the county concerned; all remissions must be certified to state auditor, may hear complaints that property subject to taxation has been omitted or unfairly assessed or the law evaded or violated, and institute proceedings.

Industrial and commercial corporations shall in May make annual report to the commission according to prescribed forms to be answered before September and certified to state auditor and by him to the state treasurer for collection at the present rate this year and the increased rate hereafter in addition to initial fees. Corporations not for profit shall make such reports in November; insurance mutuals shall pay a fee of $10; incorporated religious, benevolent or literary corporations having no capital stock, secret societies and mutual protection organizations of employees a fee of $1 with each annual report. Fees and penalties shall be paid into the state's general fund, and be first lien upon property of such corporations. Penalty of capitalized corporation for failure to file report or pay assessment within 30 days shall be an increase of 15 per cent of the required fee. Action may be brought by attorney general upon request of the commission to collect fee and penalty; if default is willful court may revoke charter.

The commission may increase or decrease in value the shares of incorporated and unincorporated banks issuing capital stock and review returns to and valuations for taxation fixed by county auditor, which are to be reported to the commission, if the commission suspects that the value of bank property reported is not at its true value in money, and shall grant hearings regarding the same.

Quadrennial appraisements of land are to be certified by county auditor to the commission. The decennial state board of equalization is abolished and its powers conferred upon the commission. The commission shall prepare and furnish county auditors required forms for all returns to be made by them; exercise authoritative powers to enforce the laws; its orders shall be obeyed by all taxing officials; may order reappraisal of real or personal property in any taxing district if satisfied that such property was not assessed at its true value in money; may raise or lower the assessed value upon real or personal property of an owner or owners after notice and hearing in the county where the property is situated or owner resides; order omitted property placed upon duplicate; appoint an appraiser or board of appraisers to make reappraisements ordered in a taxing district; may increase or decrease aggregate valuations in any county, city, village or taxing district as will fix the apportionment at true value in money; such increases or decreases to be certified to county auditor and by him apportioned in the county.

Some of the Penalties.

Failure to fill out and return blanks, failure or refusal to answer questions therein, false answers given willfully, failure to produce books and records or to permit examination of same by properly authorized person, on the part of officer, agent or employee of public utility or other corporations, shall be subject to a penalty of not more than $1,000 fine for each offense; also $500 to $1,000 fine from a public utility for each offense in obedience to orders of a general officer thereof; violations of other provisions for which penalty is not specifically stipulated, neglect or refusal to obey lawful requirements or orders of the commission shall be subject to fine of $25 to $1,000 for each offense; members of commission, members of local board of equalization, or an assessor who willfully lists real or personal property at other than its true value in money shall be subject to fine of $50 to $500, and if an officer shall forfeit his office or position. Each day such violation continues shall constitute a separate offense.

THE LAWLER MEMORANDUM.

Strange Complications of the Ballinger Case.

INVESTIGATION ALMOST OVER.

Senator Root's Absence May Delay the Report—Ballinger's Charge of Conspiracy—Overhauling the Entire Customs Service—Biggest Battleships of the World Being Planned.

Washington, May 19.—The last sessions of the Ballinger investigation are greater than the first. Although the inquiry is so near an end, no one can tell what dynamite the case may yet contain. The letter of the president admitting that the Wickersham review of the Glavis charges had been attended at Mr. Taft's own suggestion and confirming the testimony of Kerby that Assistant Attorney General Lawler had prepared the draft which became the basis of the president's exoneration of Ballinger has furnished the latest explosion in this strange case. To add to the complications the White House had previously issued a denial of Kerby's evidence as to the draft of the letter prepared by Lawler. On the heels of this Attorney General Wickersham submitted to the investigating committee the text of the Lawler letter itself, examination of which proved that it had been used by the president, some sentences having been incorporated verbatim, as was subsequently stated in President Taft's letter to Senator Nelson laying bare the entire transaction. One other complication is that Lawler, although an assistant attorney general, is assigned to duty in the interior department and is thus practically under Secretary Ballinger and himself an official of the accused department. One bright spot in the affair is that the president refused to incorporate in his letter Mr. Lawler's reflections on Clifford Pinchot and his implied approval of the Cunningham claims.

Ballinger Alleges Conspiracy.

In his final testimony Secretary Ballinger grew more bitter than ever. He accused Engineer Davis of the reclamation service of having received pay from a private concern while still drawing his per diem from the government; he charged Pinchot, Glavis, Garfield and others with having formed a conspiracy to retire him (Ballinger) to private life; said that the pamphlet animating up the prosecution in this case had been issued from Pinchot's home, testified that the discharged forester had once spoken of him as "a yellow dog," intimated that the fulminations of ex-Governor Pardee and others against his administration of the interior department had been inspired by Pinchot and introduced a brief giving his own side of the case. The disposition now is to crowd the hearing to a speedy close. The difficulty of a quick ending is that Senator Root is leaving for Europe to represent the United States in a case before a special international tribunal at The Hague and therefore cannot be here to sign the committee report. The case in which Senator Root is to appear is that of the Newfoundland fisheries. When he will return to America is problematical. As he is a member of the Ballinger investigating committee a report can hardly be made until he comes back.

Customs Service Shaken Up.

Not only is the New York customs house force being overhauled, but charges are being made in the special agents' division of the treasury department which has to do with the customs service. The New Orleans customs house is being investigated, and the whole service generally is being shaken up in a way that should do good. If the process continues long enough it should succeed at least in introducing a condition of temporary honesty.

Bigger Battleships.

Each year the two new Dreadnoughts built by the American navy are larger than those of the year before. The other day the Florida was launched, and the boat went far and wide that it is to be the greatest battleship afloat. Yet the naval experts are already planning two more that will outclass the Florida. The design is to adopt the fourteen inch gun, which is larger than any naval gun now in use in the world.

Selling Friar Lands to the Sugar Trust.

Representative Martin of Colorado continues to introduce resolutions to investigate the sale to the sugar trust of the friar lands in the Philippines. One of his latest inquiries concerns what is known as the Calamba estate, which was in some sense the cause of the Filipino rebellion in 1906. Mr. Martin referred to the fact that 20,000 acres of the Calamba estate had been sold by the government to the Dillingham sugar interests of Honolulu. He characterized the failure to put this land into the hands of small holders, as originally contemplated, and the sale of it to sugar interests "as nothing short of a crime."

Leon Fondles a Child.

In Pittsburg a savage lion fondled the hand that a child thrust into his cage. Danger to a child is sometimes great when least regarded. Often it comes through Colds, Croup, and Whooping Cough. They say thousands that Dr. King's New Discovery could have saved. "A few doses cured our baby of a bad case of croup," writes Mrs. George B. Davis, of Flat Rock, N. C. "We always give it to him when he takes cold. It's a wonderful medicine for babies." Best for Coughs, Colds, La Grippe, Asthma, Hemorrhages, Weak Lungs. 50c., $1.00. Trial bottle free. THE JUVENILE AID SOCIETY, WHAT IS IT?

In January, 1909, the Juvenile Aid Society was organized and incorporated for the purpose of co-operation with the juvenile court in its work for the uplifting and advancement of dependent, neglected and delinquent children of Licking county.

So far by much the greater effort of the society has been directed toward the provision of clothing for dependent children whose parents or guardians have been found unable to fully provide for them; that this work supplies a real need has been amply proven by the experience of the past year. In the first four months preceding the report of the secretary for the first of the year there had been an average outlay by the society on this account of $15.00 per month.

Of the 93 members 50 are active and 43 are associate members. The yearly dues of one dollar per member are, by judicious management, made to do all the good possible, and no effort is considered too great by the active members that will bring in financial returns to swell the fund in the treasury.

The society gladly receives old clothing which the sewing committee repairs or remodels. This clothing is kept at the office of the probation officers in the court house and Mrs. Miller is always glad to receive a consignment.

On Sunday afternoons a Sunday school assembles in the convention room of the court house. It has been found sometimes possible to interest children in this Sunday school, where they could not be induced to go into the churches, and after attending this school for a while they are often led into the church. Just at present the great need of this Sunday school is the services of some lady who can sing and teach songs to the children. If any friend of the cause who reads this will kindly volunteer to help out in this way, it will be greatly appreciated.

We feel that the first year of our existence as a society has been productive of much good, and we see large opportunities in the future for better and broader work, and increasingly larger results. The world is awakening to a realization of the importance of the child; to see that the drifting of the individual from registered childhood into purposeless or vicious maturity is not a matter which affects the individual alone, but becomes a grave menace to the welfare of our country—the worthless character of a portion of the material in the structure of the community may well endanger the whole. Therefore the slogan of today is "Save the child"—both for his own sake and for the sake of the community and of the country in time present and in time future. We cannot afford to neglect the child of today who will be the man of tomorrow; parliament demands that we work without ceasing for higher and better citizenship.

It is the object of the Juvenile Aid Society to place in the hands of the child a book which is not only a moral and financial support, but a guide to a better life.

Newark fans weren't caring a whole lot Wednesday night whether or not Halley's comet would hit Mother Earth or not, for a fond hope of fandom was shattered when the Chillicothe Babes struck the first game of the season with Newark into their bat legs. These two rivals for diamond honors have been going neck and neck all through the season—in the cellar job—with the Molders leading by a neck, but for a short time the supporters of the local team had visions of passing the Babes in the race. But they won't on this series.

The two teams had a sort of Fourth of July appearance when they were on the field, for the Babes sported red and blue outfits, quite dainty in appearance while the lowly Molders wore their regular white home uniforms with blue trimmings. Maybe it was the brilliancy of the costumes against the green and brown stage setting that bothered the locals, or maybe the umpire was to blame, figure it any way you like, but the fact remains that the gang from the first capital of Ohio routed away from Newark at their first meeting. Their comfortable score was 3 to 0.

It was a pitchers' battle with Charley Hollingsworth doing a peek-a-boom that kept the fans guessing, but the ninth round was too much for the man with mystifying delivery. He seemed tired and the result of his let down were two runs for the opposition. Harrison, premier heavier for the callers, worked a nice, steady game and his support was clean. That made a difference of one run. Timely hitting behind him caused two more scores that were not needed.

During the melee there were three men who caused fans to wonder all of the time and one man who pulled off one real stunt. Conley for the locals, and Schuler for the visitors were there on the defensive job all during the ninety-five minutes of labor. The third corner men had their "busy day" sign flashed to the mast during the game and they are entitled to a little recognition. The other cause of breath catching was Fryer, the clubber who landed for a homer over the left field fence, his drive going farther and cleaner than old Nesser's during the recent Lima series. Bey Hanna at short also did some nice field work that the fans compelled him to acknowledge when he walked towards the Molders' roost.

The Babes began their registering in the second round, rather to the surprise of the fans and fanettes, for they went down in one, two, three order in the first chapter. O'Malley smashed to left garden and he kept on travelling for Long emulated a few stunts seen at the Orpheum, and jured the ball. Ware lobbed out a sacrifice to Kendall and the juan wican trace his ancestry back to kings in the Emerald Isle, scored the first count.

Right back at them in the same frame came the Molders after Long had grounded out to Schuler. Stanley crashed into the right precinct and he went to second while Harrison was causing Conley's demise at first. When Hanna bumped the hide for a Texas leaguer into the deep short field Stanley tried to score, but a quick return via C'Malley and Harrison to Ware cut short his threatening attempt to reach home.

After that the battle rolled along without a hitch and the fans some real baseball played in bang-up style by two sets of eager athletes. Innings after innings rolled on and Babes and Molders fought on in regulation style. The former bent on retaining the place in the percentage column, the latter bound to win if such a thing were possible, but luck favored the locals' infants and their lone run was all they needed to win.

They took another spurt in the ninth lap and got away under the wire in grand circuit style. Fryer, on the second ball pitched, clouted for the second home run of the season and stopped at the visitors' bench while the fans applauded. O'Malley had blood in his eye but his best effort was a bouncer that Hanna handled. Ware ripped a finger through Conley and went to second when Hanna was thrown out at first in a fluke sacrifice that the umpire said was safe, although the players of both sides protested. Anyway Stanley grazed to first and Hanna was declared out. Harrison singled and Ware crossed the home mat. Moll was walked but Wilkie was out on a fast grounder poked towards Conley. The official score:

SHOEMAKERS ARE STILL CLIMBING

Marietta, May 18.—Marietta donated yesterday's game to Portsmouth in the eighth, when two singles, five errors and a passed ball gave the visitors four runs, and Zmich's great plumbing went for naught. Colligan hit a home run in the ninth after Meenan had singled. The score: R. H. E. Portsmouth 4, Marietta 2. Batteries—Harter and Welch; Zmich and Reilly. Umpire—Theas.

CHAMPS SCORE SHUT-OUT GAME

Lima, May 18.—The locals scored a victory in the first game of the series against the Lancaster bunch here yesterday, and the contest would have gone extra innings had it not been for an error and Wentz' wildness in the eighth. The contest was one of the prettiest witnessed on this field this season. Score: R. H. E. Lima 4, Lancaster 0. Batteries—Miller and Friend; Wentz and Welch. Umpire—Flaherty.

RADIANT HAIR.

Every Woman Can Have It These Modern Days. Nothing keeps a woman youthful more than close attention to the hair. Any woman whose hair is dull, faded or lusterless cannot be either beautiful or attractive. Dull hair casts around its owner an environment of stupidity, while the woman with brilliant, lustrous and luxuriant hair, while she may be far inferior in intellect than her dull haired sister, carries off the honors because of her resplendent hair.

In Paris, where plain women know how to make and keep themselves beautiful, the great hair dressing called Parisian Sage is much in demand. And since the introduction of Parisian Sage into America, over three years ago, society women in all the large cities have learned that the easiest, quickest and surest way to turn lifeless, dull and unattractive hair into brilliant, lustrous and luxuriant hair is to use Parisian Sage. Parisian Sage is sold by leading druggists in every town in America, and by Evans' Drug Store, who guarantee it to cure dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks, or money back.

As a gentle hint to the mercury in the thermometer, there is plenty of room at the top. Many a man who refuses to lend his influence to a doubtful scheme will sell it.

Behind the Screen

Bert Biery formerly first baseman with the Mansfield club, but now with the Canton team is critically ill of typhoid fever. His life was despaired of Tuesday.

The playing of Conley at third base was a revelation to the fans. At second he was only a fair player and his work was uncertain, but in shifting him to third Manager Bryhill has found the position that he can cover in fine style. Nothing got past him yesterday and his throws to first were fast and true.

White at first looks good. At third he was like a duck out of water, but on the initial bag he covers lots of ground and handles all the throws in excellent style.

Frank Gygli has been sold by Birmingham to Memphis in the Southern League. Birmingham has been going bad and Gygli felt that his work was suffering as a result so he asked to be sold and was accommodated by the club owners.

White was almost put out of commission in the fourth inning when he tried to block White who was running to second. White rolled him several feet but the youngster was not injured.

Harrison had a busy day in fielding his position, altogether he handled eight chances. One catch that he made of a fool was a daisy.

Goshorn is probably working in the box for Newark this afternoon and the boys are expecting an even break on the series.

LANKS TOMORROW

The Lancaster team comes tomorrow for a series of three games with the locals. This is the first time the Lanks have appeared in Newark this season and they, too, have an entirely new bunch of ball players in their line-up. The squad is under the direction of Manager Wilks, a newcomer in the Ohio State League.

DRAWS OUT POISON.

Marvelous Antiseptic That Draws Glass, Wood and Needles From the Flesh.

There never was known such a powerful drawing ointment as San Cura. Wherever it has been used it has created astonishment. It drew a needle out of the foot of the daughter of Mrs. James Hitchcock, of Centerville, Pa., after the doctor had used his lance and failed.

Used as a poultice for old or running sores, it draws all the poison out and leaves it in such condition that it is entirely healed in a few days.

Nothing so healing or antiseptic can be purchased today. It possesses so much healing virtue that it is guaranteed by W. A. Erman & Son to quickly cure any kind of piles, eczema, tetter, salt rheum, boils, carbuncles, ulcers, all kinds of chronic sores, chills and chapped hands, or money back.

SUGGESTION FOR THE GRADUATE.

With the Easter gown a thing of the past, the fair girl graduate will do well to give a thought to her commencement frock. Today's cut suggests a charming model which can be executed with good results either in lingerie material or soft silk. The fashionable draping is used to good effect in a high collar and bodice, continuing down left side of skirt to hem depth, where it is caught with a bow of soft, pink satin ribbon matching that used on bodice. In this instance the material was white satin mull, combined with a heavy silk embroidery for band on skirt and waist, and bands of shiny insertion used as indicated. Yoke and tops of short sleeves were dotted silk mull and pink satin ribbon was run through two rows of silk heading on skirt and on sleeves. If wash material is used, substitute Swiss embroidery and Valenciennes insertion.

in a saucepan, but not brown. Two tablespoons of melted butter, a teaspoonful of lemon juice, and a seasoning of salt and pepper. Pack this into the fish, baste with melted butter and pour around it in the pan half a cupful of boiling water in which a teaspoonful of butter has been melted. Bake about an hour, basting every ten minutes.

BROWNSVILLE SCHOOL PAPER EDITED BY PUPIL

Brownsville, May 17.—The officers of the Brownsville school club sent word to us on May 16 that all material which we intended to send to the Brownsville school paper must be in before May 17. This was very short notice, but we will do the possible under the conditions.

Our school inspector Snyder was with us May 16th and assisted us in making our school paper to second order. We are all pleased with the help he has given us and would be greatly pleased to have him with us again as he gave the students some good advice.

The building at our school to second order means another teacher, additional laboratory apparatus and a larger library.

Our school will close one of the most successful years in its history on June 2.

On the evening of June 10, the tenth annual commencement of the Brownsville high school will be held in the school auditorium. The graduates will be six in number. Prof. F. F. Fendley of Athens will deliver the class address thanks to the untiring efforts of Prof. Spohn, who has assisted us in so many ways.

Several students have been distinguished in their early morning studies by persons looking for the comet, but have not been worried, since very few have been able to see this celestial traveler, who visits us every three-fourths of a century.

As a general rule it is hard to find astronomers who agree on the comet. The arrival of this comet is certainly a treat to astronomers and beyond a doubt many of the things which to this day have been mysteries will be cleared away. But in the place of these things which will be discovered many other problems will have to be solved.

This last statement can be proven by the old quotation so often given. "Time makes ancient oddments new." Then do we not realize that for every thing that we have found out there is always something better and greater to be learned?

Do we not realize that the harder the duties which we perform, the easier it will be to overcome difficulties. Wishing all a pleasant vacation and a successful year we humbly ask to submit these things.

WORK THAT TELLS

Plenty of It Has Been Done Right Here in Newark.

Cures that last are cures that tell. To thoroughly know the virtues of a medicine you must investigate the cures and see if they prove permanent. Doan's Kidney Pills stand this test, and plenty of proof exists right here in Newark. People who testified years ago to relief from backache, kidney and urinary disorders, now declare that relief was permanent and the cure perfect. How can any Newark suffer longer doubt the evidence?

P. Lisey, 35 S. 11th St., Newark, Ohio, says: "I am glad to confirm the public statement I gave ten years ago, regarding the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills. I was a victim of kidney trouble, and was caused much suffering by severe pains through my back. Stopping any attempt to stand in an erect position caused excruciating twinges to shoot through me, and I was often in misery. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Clayton & Co's Drug Store, proved to be better than any other remedy I had ever taken, and at once to the relief of my back and giving me prompt relief. The pains in my back disappeared and the passages of the kidney secretions were regulated. I have since been free from every symptom of kidney trouble. I shall always speak a good word for Doan's Kidney Pills."

PANAMA CANAL

Technical World Magazine Asks the Question, "Will It Pay?" and Quotes Some Figures.

What shall it profit a nation to squander more than a third of a billion dollars in digging an inter-oceanic canal which another nation already has in successful operation a rival transportation line that can carry below the possibility of competition by the canal and still make a profit?

This is the question that has confronted the people of the United States since January 1, 1907, when Mexico opened the Tehuantepec National railway for traffic. It will continue to confront them so long as the railway remains in operation in spite of all the rhetoric that can be touched off in congress or out of it.

On paper, of course, water transportation can put the railroads out of business with one hand tied. It has been demonstrated beyond the possibility of successful contradiction again and yet again that a steamship or a steamboat, or even a canal boat, can haul freight so much cheaper than a train that the latter can not even earn interest on its bonds. As a matter of fact, however, it will be remembered that the railroads, even in their crude days of undevelopment, simply took all the traffic away from the canals, which had had some years the start of them, leaving the canal boats to rot and the canals themselves to degenerate into duck ponds.

Ocean freight rates are worth on an average a dollar per ton per 1000 miles. The ordinary freight steamship makes about ten miles an hour, or 50 miles a day, thus requiring five days more to go by way of Panama, assuming the time of crossing both isthmuses to be the same. It will take a steamer about one day to pass through the Panama Canal, while the cargo could be passed across Tehuantepec and loaded into another steamer in two days, leaving four days to the advantage of the Mexican route. The extra cost of the four days to a steamer with a 5000 ton cargo to go by way of Panama would be $2000, adding the canal tolls would bring the total up to $10,000.

That this saving in actual cash by the Tehuantepec route is not merely an academic theory but a commercial reality has been demonstrated by more than three years of operation. The first demonstration was the diversion of a cargo of hundred thousand tons of sugar per year that was formerly shipped from Hawaii by way of Cape Horn to New York and Philadelphia, saving more than 30 days' time. The directness of the Mexican route is shown by the fact that a cargo which left Hong Kong April 5, 1906, reached New York by Tehuantepec, was delivered by New York May 11, making the time in transit 54 days. From Panama City to New York by the Panama Canal, it would take 10 days.

AMUSEMENTS

KEITH VAUDEVILLE AT THE AUDITORIUM

Today is the big opening of the run of Keith Vaudeville at the Auditorium theatre, and the fifth act has just been announced. It is a shining climax to a most made-up of star acts and makes two feature acts, and is nothing less than the famed Salambos, the fire eaters who have been a attracting capacity houses at the Shultz theatre, in Zanesville, during the last three days of this week. The Salambos are just from Europe, having played in Barry Lake, on England. The Salambos are the first feature act, and Milton and Polly Niles in the play, "Wm. Walker Reformed," is the second one.

Every act in the first of the bill would under different existing circumstances be a feature act, and made up of Adam and Dean, sensational high tight wire walkers, who give some of the most dangerous and entertaining feats ever performed in the wire. Arthur Browning, with his eccentric comedy work, and his friend, a little dog, which he uses in response to an encore. Harlan and Redner, in a perfectly staged and original musical act. Harlan and Rollison are heralded as Europe's greatest living concertina players.

The first evening performance begins at 7:30 this evening and the next a two conclusion of the first, and the admission prices are the regular vaudeville prices of 10 and 20 cents. Every child under 12 years of age, accompanied by a parent, is admitted free.

THE ORPHEUM.

Large houses and the performance at the Orpheum theatre yesterday, the name of come ossem, that is vaudeville, real vaudeville before and after and will still continue to bend out the best that is good. For the past few years the Orpheum has given to the poor working man the chance to visit a theatre and enjoy an evening's entertainment, and still leave him a little change besides. Messrs. Sun and Murray are here to serve the public with the best as they always have, no matter what others may say regarding the style of vaudeville that has been given, etc. In offering a roster of international vaudeville for the latter part of this week Manager Fenberg emphasizes the engagement of the Melrose Comedy Quartette, vaudeville's distinguished delineators of comedy. This quartette of clever wits will be heard in melody that is bound to please all. At Mr. Vernon, where they played the first three days, the papers speak of them as causing a "riot." The most remarkable team of the present day, from all accounts, is Welby and Pearl, whose sobriquet is "those jolly rag timers." Favorable, the gypsy violinist, makes his entrance into vaudeville, as he has just come over, having been soloist with the Royal Opera, Berlin. Kayorick will be heard in selections from the best masters and the lovers of good music will have a treat in his act. As an added attraction, we have one of the highest salaried actors now playing vaudeville, that of Lester Brothers and Creighton. Sisters who present an act of patter comedy, singing and dancing. With new pictures on the Orpheumscope, one of the best bills of the season will be presented and continue over Sunday. After the second performance tonight, "A Country Store" will be given, and for those who may have failed to learn what it is all about, we will say—all who enter the theatre tonight will receive a numbered coupon which will entitle them to a chance. The stage after the performance will be set to represent country store, with country actors, etc. As each number is called, the lucky one will come upon the stage to get his or her barrel of flour, bushel of potatoes, can of peas, a box of sardines, a pound of sugar, etc. Manager Fenberg has contracted to give away about $25 worth of groceries. You all should see the fun, as it will be fun.

AMATEURS AT ORPHEUM

Already the list is growing for the popular amateur contest at the Orpheum on Friday night, and several special stunts will be introduced. The management announces to reappearance of last week's big hit, Mr. Robert Browning, the clever musician, who will play several new compositions on his violin and mouth organ.

FUN THURSDAY NIGHT.

The "A Country Store" is going to be the picture that will draw the crowds to the Orpheum tonight. The popular theme for the present conditions is one that for anybody will be popular to the doors and all who will be greatly pleased to see the fun.

The members of the Orpheum are a part of the "A Country Store" and will be greatly pleased to see the fun.

May 19 in American History.
1750—"Dark day" in New England; darkness commenced at 11 a. m. and covered the country from New York city to Maine.
1790—Israel Putnam, famous Revolutionary soldier, died; born 1718.
1909—Henry H. Rogers, financier and director of the Standard Oil Company, died in New York; born 1840.
ASTRONOMICAL EVENTS.
(From noon today to noon tomorrow.)
Sun sets 7:10, rises 4:34; moon sets 3:05 a. m.; 6 p. m. planet Mercury at descending node, crossing sun's path downward; Halley's comet again in evening sky and nearest earth, about 12,000,000 miles, appearing ever higher in west and setting ever later and moving rapidly; passes today 3 1/2 degrees north of Aldebaran.

THREE PATENT FACTS.
Even these who have not followed the Ballinger investigation at Washington very closely are becoming convinced of three facts in connection with it.
First that President Taft ought to fire Ballinger and get a new secretary of interior.
Second, that President Taft ought to fire Wickersham and get a new attorney general.
Third, that the people must fire President Taft in 1912 and get a new president.

PROVED IT.
Ballinger did exactly the right thing to move that the exposure made by Kelley, the stenographer, is true. He fired Kelley.

The story of a train in the South which created a sensation by appearing to arrive in time but which proved to be the train of the previous day, has been heard to a fizzle by the train which has just arrived at Salt Lake from Los Angeles, about four months and a half behind time. This train, however, is able to plead circumstances over which it had no control as the reason for its lateness. It has been marooned at Caliente since the disastrous washout at the beginning of the year.

READ THEIR RECORDS.
Now let Ned Taylor, and Albert Douglas, and Rom Johnson, and Jim Kennedy, and Woburn Thomas, and their Cannock crew of congressional candidates, discuss to their hearts' content as the campaign proceeds.
Voters will save only themselves to blame if they permit themselves to be fooled.
Those who believe all they were told in 1908 ought to know it without further warning.
The Congressional Record and their own votes on the tariff bill show how these Cannock Congressmen "surge" when they are in Washington.

Purify Your Blood
The cause of pimples, boils and other eruptions, as well as of that tired feeling and poor appetite, which are so common in the spring, is impure and impoverished blood.
The best way to purify and enrich the blood, as thousands of people know by experience, is to take
Hood's Sarsaparilla
Accept no substitute, but insist on having Hood's.
Get it today in usual liquid form or chocolate tablets known as Sarsapabs.

THE TICKET.
The first general primary election under the Benson law was held on Tuesday, and it was very much in line with the long established Democratic custom in Licking county. By the nomination of the splendid ticket that is presented to the Democracy of Old Licking, the party has every opportunity of winning out by an unprecedented majority, and it is a safe thing that it will make the most of it. The Democrats this year have nominated one of the strongest and cleanest tickets that has ever been placed before the people of Licking county. There is not a man nominated but who will command a large vote and will receive a generous majority at the polls. The ticket meets the approval of Democrats generally, and while all the candidates were excellent men, all could not be nominated. This, however, was understood at the outset, and there is no hard feeling on the part of any of the defeated candidates.
All is harmony and good feeling, as it should be, otherwise it would not be Democratic. Every voter who participated in the primary election on Tuesday realizes that he helped in his individual capacity to make the ticket and hence he will put his shoulder to the wheel and give the nominees his most active and sincere support at the fall election.
The substantial vote given the candidates for the nomination for the various offices, whether successful or not shows that every man had numerous friends and supporters, and cannot help but be a source of gratification to them.
The result is known. The ticket of the majority is in the field and stands at the Advocate's head. It is composed of popular men—all "good runners"—to use a political phrase—and in its entirety it speaks for all true loyal supporters of the party and commands itself to the voters of all parties.

Ex-Governor Rollins of New Hampshire, who came into conflict a few days ago with the custom house officials in New York over a question of a bit of family smuggling, has always been a mild high protectionist, but he will doubtless be able to meet this situation with unflinching courage when he considers how much good high protection is conferring on his rich friends.

Philadelphia Record: In a recent interview of Mayor Gaynor concerning the question of evicting a home for inebriates he said that drunkenness is going out of fashion in New York. Inevitably, in his opinion, is no longer in good tone. Coincident with this a reporter on Long Island has told off his checked gear to order to peace war men prohibition is an enemy of temperance. In this he apparently agrees with the Mayor.

LOST NOMINATION; GIVEN GOOD JOB
Delaware, May 18.—Much surprise was created here today by the announcement that W. B. Marston, who was turned down by the Republicans for sheriff by 1000 major, had been reappointed by Judge E. M. Wickham and his associates, as special county detective for three years, at a salary of $1200 per year.

CARD OF THANKS.
To the voters of Licking county who supported me at the Democratic Primary. Please accept my kindest regards for the support you gave me.
HENRY C. KELLER.

BIGGEST "AD" EVER PRINTED IN ADVOCATE

The largest single advertisement ever published by the Advocate in the ninety years of its history appears in this issue. It is a fifteen column advertisement—one column over two pages—printed in two colors with one impression on the Advocate's new twelve page Duplex press.

This advertisement which speaks for itself, was prepared by Mr. W. F. Alward, general manager of Stewart Bros. & Alward Company's store in the Arcade and the Union Block. It announces a tremendous unloading sale of $75,000 worth of household furnishing goods, furniture, stoves, carpets, curtains, etc. This store is preparing to add new lines and to make room for the carpenters and workmen who will prepare the store for the new merchandise, the company will reduce its stock by a 15 day unloading sale. The prices quoted in the big red and black advertisement today are interesting.

IRON TRADE REVIEW
Cleveland, May 19.—The Iron Trade Review today says: The improvement in sentiment in the iron and steel trade noted last week has been followed by an increase in new business in most branches, and heavier specifying in practically all branches of finished material. While it is true that low quotations are still being made in some branches, in other lines prices are firmer than a week ago, the situation, taken as a whole, is more encouraging than for several weeks. Production in some departments is perhaps a little lighter than during the first quarter, and this action on the part of producers has served to strengthen the market generally. Masters, while admitting that heavy forward buying so far this year has been below expectation, state that buying in most lines is more general than during the first quarter, and the belief is growing that the market will be more active during the last half of the year than during the first six months. It is expected that joint meetings will be held next week between wage scale committees of the Amalgamated association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers and iron and steel companies which deal with the Amalgamated association, to arrange a new scale for the year beginning July 1. The bottling and finishing scales will call for an advance and it is expected that similar action will be taken with regard to the sheet and tin plate scales.

Interesting Reading for Tubercular Invalids
Eckman Mfg. Co.'s Booklet of Cured Cases Part of the Anti-Tuberculosis Crusade.
The makers of Eckman's Alternative—the medicine that is curing tuberculosis all over the country—have distributed a booklet that every consumptive should read. It tells in their own language the true story of those whom Eckman's Alternative has cured.
Many medical booklets sign their testimonials with initials, or give the city or State, and not the street address. The booklet will send direct, a pamphlet that gives the full name, address (street, city and State), also the date. We urge you to write or call on these people and hear their story direct.
Such straight-from-the-heart evidence as this booklet holds is convincing, indeed. We offer proofs—we do not want you to pay the money and still be homesick and die. The booklet is free and communicated with those whose grateful letters alone have made possible the publishing of this booklet.
No matter if you have unfortunately spent time and money experimenting with nearly every "cure" under the firmament—investigate Eckman's Alternative. If a father whose only son was cured of tuberculosis by Eckman's Alternative after all hope had been abandoned, would it not carry some weight with you?
Eckman's Alternative is good for all Throat and Lung troubles, and is on sale by the nearest Druggist or other house.
It can also be obtained at or procured by your local Druggists. Ask for Booklet of Cured Cases or write for Evidence to the Eckman Laboratory, Phila., Pa.

It is only in fairy tales that people marry and live happily ever after.
It seems as though the good either die young, or outgrow it.

Notice to Owners and Drivers of Automobiles
I hereby call the attention of persons interested in this notice to the ordinance of the City of Newark regulating the speed of running your machines; also to the side of the street you run them, as the number being run on our streets is becoming greater every day. I want to impress all who are interested in this notice with the importance of complying with the ordinance not only regarding speed but in keeping on the right side of the street, and all kinds of vehicles should do the same. Now it is considerable expense to be publishing notices of this kind and I shall not do so again, but warn all who are interested that if they are found guilty they will be punished.

SEEVER'S DYSPEPSIA TABLETS
Have you dyspepsia? If you have perhaps you want to get rid of it. You can by taking Seaver's Dyspepsia Tablets. We do not print any pictures of before and after taking. You get them by standing before the looking glass. If you don't believe this, try the tablets and you will. We have proved that Seaver's Dyspepsia Tablets will cure dyspepsia over and over again. We are ready to demonstrate it in your case, and we will tell you how. Go to the store of Erman and Son and get a package. Take it according to directions. If it cures you, step in and tell the druggist so. If it doesn't step in just the same, and tell him that, and he will hand you right back the ducats you paid him. Do you suppose this offer would be made if we had any doubts about what the tablets will do for you? Do you see any way that you can lose any money out of it? But if you really enjoy dyspepsia, and want to retain it permanently, let Seaver's Dyspepsia Tablets alone, for the tablets won't let dyspepsia alone.
The chief trouble about getting married is all the money you think you would have had if you hadn't done it.

The Brown Study

by LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

WHEN with her own hand, as fragile and delicate as a child's, as inexorable as Destiny's, Eleanor locked herself out of the empty, darkened house that her girlhood had called home. It was with a sense of having by that act builded an impenetrable barrier between yesterday and tomorrow. Over the way, smiling its jealous barrier, Gramercy Park basked in the hot, gilded sunlight of a mid-morning late in the waning spring. The air was heavy, stifling with the sweet cloying smell of its verdure. She stood a minute on the high brown-stone stoop, thinking deeply. Then suddenly she ran down the steps and hurried westward, chin high, eyes shining, an adventurous color mantling her face.

Copyright 1908, by Benj. B. Hampton.

A Broadway street car, hailing and swinging around a north-bound Columbus Avenue car. Somewhere in the fifties, near Carnegie Hall, she rose and alighted. Down-hill to the weather-worn scaffolding of the Sixth Avenue "L" ran a block largely given over to buildings of a curiously composite character, the ground floors occupied by groceries, those above by studios. Midway between the avenues Miss Rowan found an open doorway topped by a fanlight that bore a number she verified carefully. Entering, she ascended two long and narrow flights of steps, broken by a cramped landing. At the top, pausing breathless, she found herself in a deep, broad corridor, upon which four doors stood open; a fifth, at the rear of the building, was shut. Before this she bent and lifted a corner of the mat.

Surely enough, a key was there. The girl lifted it to the lock, opened the door, and shut herself in. Her initial impression was compounded of disappointment and resentment; the room very sparsely furnished, in distinct contrast to the memory she had of it. She had looked forward to something less Spartan in its artistic simplicity. Yet a second glance reassured her to some extent; the room was fitted with all things needful for the comfort of independent youth. Her long coat she draped over the corner of a screen; her hat she disposed coquettishly on top of the coat. Then she sat herself down in a ramshackle basket chair, for a moment's rest and quiet survey of her newly annexed territory.

The moment lengthened into minute; the minute into many. The chair was comfortable, the studio quiet; through an open window at the back, drowsy air breathed, freighted with dreams. After a time Eleanor opened her purse and took from it a letter, which she re-read with a smile.

"Dear Nell" (It ran in part): "I'm off to-morrow on the Ettrick, armed with a letter of marque, in the shape of a traveling scholarship in Europe—awarded yesterday. No time to see you here: the scheme: you frequently complained of feeling lonely in the Gramercy Square house, since Aunt Emma died. My studio would be working for you—unless you use it. Why not? You can be comfortable! I'm leaving the house and take the janitor orders to behave. There'll be some water in the ice-box (on the fire-escape) if you eat there quick enough. . . . Your aff. second cousin, Gerald."

Still smiling, Eleanor lowered the hand that held the letter. Her gaze wandered out of the open window, her thoughts at random. If Jerry moved, her thoughts would be rattle-brained, what was she, who had fallen in so readily with his scheme?

In this mood Penoyer found her. He came in suddenly out of breath, and rapped the door. The surprise in his face gave way to a smile, and he nodded pleasantly, unashamed.

"Good morning," he gave her cheerfully. "I haven't kept you waiting long. Sorry, but I see you've made yourself comfortable. That's all right."

Miss Rowan gasped; but before she could reflect her wits, Penoyer continued: "Had to run out on an errand; when I found you was to be detained, I hoped you'd find the key under the mat. You won't mind sitting until half past one? Bully."

His voice ran with satisfaction so genuine that she hardly liked to dash it; while Miss Rowan sought for a gentle form of rebuke, he rattled on. "Sit down—I'm not quite ready yet." And somehow she found herself obeying. "Awfully glad you found you could get here to-day. Ballister told me Saturday he'd send you if you could make time." A glance appraised her with open admiration. That's a ripping gown, you know—perfectly stunning! Ballister said there wasn't another model in New York who dressed as well as you."

Eleanor flushed indignantly, and started to protest, getting as far as "I'm not—" before her words were drowned by the rumble and squeal of a heavy easel Penoyer was wheeling to the middle of the floor. By the time she could make herself heard, she thought better of it. She understood only now that she had blundered into the wrong door. It was best, she thought, to accept the situation as it lay, pose for the young man who took no so serenely for granted, make an eventual apologetic without question, and be more careful thereafter.

She stole swift, curious glances at Penoyer, when he did not know it. He seemed a new type, her experience of men. Quite unconcernedly he moved his coat and draped his shoulders with a salt-smeared smock. He squinted at Eleanor with a critical detachment to which she was not used. He had to remind herself that while to her he was human being, a personality, to him she was merely a problem in light and color.

"As you were when I came in, please," he directed tersely. "You were thinking—a letter in your hand, I believe. It's not a hard pose, and the absolute unconsciousness was charming. . . . That's it. Head a thought this way, please. I want your profile; it's as nearly perfect as anything I ever hope to see. . . . And the way the light catches in your hair's simply gorgeous! There. . . . For some moments no sound was audible within the four walls, aside from the pit-pat of brushes on prepared canvas. Then the young man began to chatter with engaging inconsequence. Fortunately his name passed his lips. Later it occurred to him to remark that "Ballister" had mentioned the model's name, but that he, Penoyer, had forgotten it.

to resume the pose. Throughout the sitting the half-hours were so divided. Promptly at one-thirty Penoyer laid aside his palette.

"That's all for to-day," His tone did not lack regret. "What do you think of it?"

Smiling diffidently, Eleanor rose and joined him before the canvas. She stood silent, rapt in sheer wonder. To her his ability seemed little less than marvelous. The canvas ran the gamut of shades of brown, from the palest golden brown of the wicker chair to the rich deep copper tint of her wonderfully wavy hair. Between these there was the brown of the tarnished cloth-of-gold tapestry, which formed the background; the creamy brown of her shirt-waist, the deeper side of her skirt, the ivory of her cheeks and temples, relieved by the rich scarlet of her lips, and the velvety, glowing sea-brown of her dressing eyes.

"The Brown Study," said Penoyer, at her shoulder. "We'll call it that, for a pretty average poor pun—in paint," he rounded out the alliteration with a chuckle.

"Of course, you know," said Miss Rowan seriously, "that's it is wonderfully clever. It's fairly incredible that you should do anything so quickly! Why, I looked at it during the last rest and it was only paint!"

Penoyer's eyes shifted from the canvas to her own; he grinned quizzically. "I pulled it together in a hurry," he admitted, "because I wasn't sure of another pose. There's nothing sound in that—just mere superficial smartness. It needs—deserves—study. When can you come again? To-morrow?"

"I . . . Why? . . ." Eleanor's face burned beneath his regard. Dared she carry on the deception? And risk of discovery? "I'll come—yes, surely," she stammered; and was appalled by her own temerity.

"Good enough. Nine o'clock sharp, then," Penoyer thrust a hand into a pocket and produced three silver half-dollars. "Better settle up every day," he suggested amiably. "Then we always know where we stand."

Dismayed, Eleanor hung in irresolution for an instant, and in final desperation accepted her wage. Stammering her thanks, she suffered the painter to help her with her coat, aware of her one imperative need—to get away. In a flurry she adjusted her coat, doubtless with less care than ever before in her experience; dropped her veil between her traitorous face and a keen-eyed world; and—somehow, in a rush—fled down the stairs to the street.

The corner lamp post set Eleanor right, verifying her surmise that the conductor's carelessness had conspired with her own absence of thought to set her feet in a street one block removed from that which she had sought. In the next street to the south she found a building in whose entry-way she was, this time, at pains to pause long enough to search out upon the list of tenants the title and estate of "Gerald Donovan, Artist."

Here, as in the first instance, she found two long flights of stairs, with the deep corridor at the top, upon which four doors stood ajar, the fifth and last, being shut. But here, if she required further reassurance, she found it in the circumstance of her trunk, at rest before the closed door; and, super-imposed upon it, his back to the rear window, the figure of one whom she hastily assumed to be the expressman patiently awaiting his receipt.

As she hurried toward him the man arose. "You've kept me waiting the deuce of a while, Nelly," he complained, by way of greeting; "most all of an hour."

The girl stopped short with a brief exclamation of displeasure: "George Ingels!" That person shaped his thin lips into a deprecatory smile. His pale eyes remained mirthless. "I'd begun to worry about you—really!" he protested.

"You had no right," asserted Eleanor shortly. "Why have you followed me?"

"I had to see you, Nelly," explained Ingels in an injured tone. "Got your letter last night—came to town this morning—found your house closed—bit of a Sherlock Holmes, you know—easy to trace you."

"If I had wished you to, don't you suppose I would have sent you my address?"

The man smiled, further apologetic, and began to slip off one of his immaculate chamois gloves. "I felt it was my duty."

"You are wasting your time, Mr. Ingels," interposed the girl decidedly, but not unkindly.

"But really, it isn't—ah—right, you know—"

"What is not right?"—sharply.

Ingels waved the yellow glove comprehensively. "All this sort of thing—you know—girl of your standing—no chaperon—ah—"

Key in hand, Eleanor straightened up from exploration beneath the door-mat. "George Ingels," she enunciated with deliberation, "you weary me. You always did, I think. Please go away."

"But, Nelly," he persisted, producing an object for which he had been fumbling in his waistcoat pocket. "I want to know what this means. He nodded toward the slender hoop of gold, set with a single, concealing stone, as though he held it evidence of some absolute, irrefragable, perjury of hers.

"That? I sold it back," Eleanor flashed indignantly. "That has only one meaning that I know of."

Ingels brought himself to look aggrieved. "But, Nelly, it's always been understood."

"Then it's time the misunderstanding was corrected."

"But your parents approved—"

"That was a long time ago. Won't you please take no for an answer, George?"

The man's lips tightened sullenly. "I refuse to release you," he said.

Anger flared ominously in the girl's eyes. She unlocked the studio door, and, with her back to the painter, "Please do go," she reiterated, still patient. "I've changed my mind."

I haven't a minute to spare to take back the ring!"

turned back, snatched up the ring, and disappeared. Consistently Eleanor employed the remainder of the afternoon and the best part of the evening in vacillation, her humor of two complexions; she would, she would not, return to pose for Penoyer's Brown Study. At bed-time, she wouldn't, and fell asleep placidly convinced that she had chosen the safer course. She awoke as unshakably determined. At nine she was knocking a timid knock at Penoyer's studio door.

The matter-of-course reception he accorded her proved annoying. Penoyer himself was exasperatingly wrapped up in his work; he got at it immediately, with deft, confident brush-strokes building upon the ground work of his brilliant sketch a living womanly incarnation of the charming mystery that Miss Rowan was to him. When the girl was permitted to inspect the result of the morning's work, she forgave him. And on the morrow returned—this time a true more confidently.

She was slipping without a wrench from the old-time ordered routine to the new, so strangely unrestricted. No one, not even George Ingels—certainly no regret for him—troubled her. She was naively happy and contented.

On the third morning she assumed her pose in the basket-chair with a sign of sheer delight to be there. At the easel the young man painted steadily through a still, singing half-hour. Then came interruption—a rap on the door, which, as always, stood ajar, the opening protected by a screen. The girl neither moved nor turned her head as the painter went to answer—smothering an exclamation of annoyance.

"One Day She Praised her Portrait, Then She Said 'Enough'."

"Oh, he still, now," Eleanor said, looking at the portrait. "My portrait?"

The girl smiled. "If to absolute perfection, there was no mistake. A George Ingels, after all."

"Why, yes," said Penoyer at the door. "Nothing disconcerting about it. George Ingels, of her day, Eleanor saw that he was in time costume."

On my way to the studio, I saw you and your portrait. I don't know how it came to be there."

"Yes," Penoyer said to the painter. "I'm working."

"Go right ahead," he protested. "I'm not in the way. I'll just go."

"I haven't a minute to spare to take back the ring!"

"Fine thing, this," he enthused, waving his riding-crop. "Sheraton?"

"Chippendale," corrected its owner.

"Care to sell it?"

"I'm not running an antique shop," retorted Penoyer, offended.

"Oh, of course not, old chap—big pardon."

Ingels turned and stood staring at the girl for several moments in silence. Presently he joined Penoyer before the easel. After a pause he inquired when it would be finished. "In three days," said Penoyer.

"And what're you asking?"

"For this?" There followed a prolonged silence. The girl understood that Penoyer for the first time was permitting himself to view his handiwork with a detached, impersonal air. He shook his head gently.

"I don't care to sell."

"No?" queries Ingels, in counterfeit surprise.

"It's very—ah—interesting, you know."

"Yes, I know," agreed Penoyer in a dry tone that closed the conversation.

Shortly after, Ingels took his departure without betraying any resentment of the painter's lack of cordiality. He said nothing about returning; Eleanor dared hope that he would not. What she did not dare hope was that he would refrain from annoying her by a call at her studio; but in this apprehension she was pleasantly disappointed. The fourth sitting too, was marked by no interruption of any sort, the fifth only by a curious change in Penoyer's demeanor.

She remarked that he seemed to be working with a devotion notably less sedulous; for minutes at a time he would stand motionless, brush poised, eyes dwelling upon his model with an effect of profound brooding slightly tinged with melancholy. She discovered that those eyes did not always into the chair, hearing Penoyer greet Ingels as if their voices came from a distance.

"Morning, Pen. Couldn't forget that study of yours, you know, and thought I'd drop up for another look. It's great, you know—immense."

"I'm glad you like it," returned Penoyer. A slight pause followed, Ingels, assured, at gaze before the easel, Penoyer standing to one side, his glance wavering between his model and the portrait.

"You haven't changed your mind, have you?" Ingels advanced at length.

"About what?" Penoyer parried uselessly.

"Selling?"

Penoyer hesitated. "It's—it's quite the best thing I've done."

"Well?" interrupted Ingels, insolently, "you don't want five thousand, do you?"

Penoyer blushed painfully. "No," he said slowly; "you know very well my work's not worth as much to-day. But I do want a thousand."

"You'll sell for that?"

"Yes—for cash," Penoyer conceded.

"Will a cheque next Monday do you?"

"Yes—"

"Done!" Ingels slapped his puttee exultantly with his riding-crop. The girl was conscious of his glance upon her, informed with extravagant malice. She sat sunk in ineffable misery, deaf to his concluding remarks as, pleading as an engagement, he made off, too polite to linger and gloat over her discomfiture, lest Penoyer should find cause to change his mind again.

As he went, another took his place at the door, a student occupying one of the other rooms in the building, asking Penoyer to step into his "place" for two minutes and help him out with some technical difficulty. The painter followed him. Eleanor was left alone.

Abruptly she left the chair, feeling only that she could not remain to face Penoyer again. She struggled dazedly into her coat, put on her hat, and darted quickly down the empty corridor, blind with anguish.

In the dull warm dusk of evening she returned, timing herself to reach Penoyer's studio at an hour when he would most probably be absent, dining. But even if he were there, she was determined.

The studio was empty. Only, in the middle of the floor, rose the gaunt frame-work of the easel that held the Brown Study, now invisible behind its dust curtain.

With an audible sigh of relief the girl pushed the door to. Beneath the skylight she paused to examine her purse and reassure herself as to the safety of its contents—ten one-hundred dollar bills, newly drawn from her bank that same afternoon.

Thrusting the curtain aside, with adroit fingers she unfastened the canvas and lifted it to the floor. The curtain fell back into place. The portrait itself was not too large for her to carry through the darkening streets, in that neighborhood where the sight of art students carrying their work about was nothing uncommon, even in daylight. And then she hesitated, temporarily at a loss for a place to leave the bills, where Penoyer would be sure to find them, where another would not think of looking.

In the corridor footsteps sounded. A man laughed briefly, and then she heard Penoyer's voice, subdued and steady. In panic she cast about for a hiding place.

His footsteps were approaching, but an interruption gave her an instant's advantage. Someone called his name from the stairway and he stopped to reply.

"Hello?"

"Penoyer?" Her heart leaped and fell: it was Ingels. "I say, Pen, I want to see you a moment."

Trembling with dismay the girl seized the canvas and bore it with her behind the screen, from which refuge she heard Penoyer somewhat coldly invite Ingels to "Come in, then." And the two men entered. A match was lighted; a gas jet flared. Then the painter's voice: "Well?"—with a note of weariness.

"I got your note at the club," Ingels spoke with restrained heat. "I want to know."

"Doesn't the note explain itself? I've decided not to sell."

"But—damn it!—you agreed; a bargain's a bargain. I intend to hold you."

"You'll find that a hard job. I won't sell. That's final."

"I suppose you think you'll get a higher price by holding it."

"Possibly?"

"Well, I can inform you that you're wasting your time, Eleanor."

"You mean Miss Rowan? What about her?"

"You don't mean to say you don't know she's my fiancée?"

A pause; then Penoyer, slowly: "No-o, I didn't know that. Furthermore, I don't believe it. Circumstances don't bear out your statement."

"Why, you damned little fortune-hunter—"

"Ingels!" Penoyer cut him short in a tone so imperative that the man's rage choked him. "Before I throw you out of that door, sir, I give you two minutes to explain just what you mean by that."

"Mean?" Ingels snarled. "I mean you know well enough she's got a small fortune in her own right, and that you're refusing to sell me this portrait in order to make a gallery-play—"

"That's enough," interrupted Penoyer. "Now I'll throw you out of the door for your insolence, anyway, but first I want to say something. . . . I didn't know this. I only agreed to sell the picture to get money enough to ask her to marry me. Apparently she resented the sale, she ran away, and I've no notion where to find her. Now, Mr. Ingels, are you got?"

There was a scuffle of feet, a sound of hurried breathing; an oath from Ingels, and an abrupt, heavy fall in the corridor. Then: "Had enough?"

Ingels Penoyer from the threshold.

But Mr. Ingels was satisfied, it appeared. With some indications of haste, he departed. Penoyer turned back into the studio and stopped still with a little air of rueful wonder. "Oh-h—"

Eleanor stood by the edge of the screen, poised anxiously, as if on the point of flight. But she met his gaze with eyes lambent with the light of her divine courage.

For a space neither moved, nor spoke. Then Penoyer shook his head smiling sadly.

"Of course," said he, "you heard. I . . . I don't know what to say to you, Miss Rowan, I . . ."

With an adorable gesture she raised her hands and held them out to him. "Can you," she pleaded in a low voice broken by a little, fluttering catch—"Are you brave enough to say to me now what you said a moment ago, when you thought . . ."

But Penoyer was saying more.
